The feature was announced earlier this month on Twitter's blog, which stated that Google Chrome users can now access all their Twitter accounts and receive push notifications from Twitter even when logged into a different website and when the browser is not in focus.

"You're reading one of your favorite sites, when out of nowhere Twitter gives you a message," read the blog post. "This isn't a Twitter app, Twitter doesn't want to hijack your browser, and it's not a push notification to Twitter.com itself. Instead, it's
